

A Celebration of the Life and Legacy of Stanley A. Bosworth

August 20, 1927 – August 7, 2011

Sumus Poetae

We are poets,
You may not see us,
But we see you,
We watch the Earth turn,
The wind blow
The trees sway.
We record the world
On our pieces of paper;
We notice beauty
Within, like no one else.
We are poets.

“The opportunity of Saint Ann’s School came to me as my first children were beginning to grow up. I wanted to impart to them the wonder of life. I wanted to share my years spent wandering the world, witnessing great concepts that became faiths then dwindled into farces—the sheer exhilaration of touching life. I wanted my children, all children, to know that cathedrals are sacred, whatever one’s belief, and how they may exist without walls. I wanted success in life to be defined as living successfully. In the last analysis, education is a celebration of life.”

— Stanley Bosworth
