

SUGGESTED SUMMER READING

QUICK PICKS: YOU'RE IN THE MOOD FOR...

An Epic Thriller

The Liars Society
by Alyson Gerber
No spoilers! Start with an elite private school in Boston, a girl on scholarship desperate to fit in, and a boy from a wealthy society family hoping to distinguish himself. Add a secret society that claims to control the world, a mysterious island, and dangerous family secrets—and you have this page-turner extraordinaire.

A Typewriter Book?

Olivetti by Allie Millington Like all typewriters, Olivetti recalls everything ever typed on him, but he adheres to the code of typewriter secrecy—until the mother in the family he'd lived with goes missing. Abandoned by the family in favor of a computer, Olivetti is still loyal and thinks his memories may hold the key to the mystery, so he reveals himself to 12-year-old Ernest. Together they race across San Francisco following clues they hope will lead them to Ernest's mom.

A Cat Book 🐱

The Cats of Silver Crescent
by Kaela Noel While Elsby is staying at her mysterious aunt's New England cottage, she sees something outside that makes her think she's gone crazy: a cat walking upright wearing a Victorian-style sailor suit. Then, that night, three cats show up asking (in English!) for her help. The spell giving them human powers is about to end—and that's not the only looming danger. Magic, friendship, and true creepiness along with coziness. And, CATS.

A Library Book, of course

The Secret Library by Kekla Magoon Annoyed with her mom and sad about the recent death of her adventure-loving grandpa, 11-year-old Dally lashes out. She opens a letter from her grandfather that was supposed to stay sealed until she turned 21. It leads her to a library of books that are portals to the past. Adventure! Family mystery! What choice will Dally make about her destiny?

A War Story

Heroes by Alan Gratz It's 1941 and World War II is raging elsewhere, but best friends Frank and Stanley—whose dads are stationed at the Pearl Harbor naval base—are living the good life in Hawaii. Then, everything explodes. The Japanese attack, and while Frank and Stanley manage to escape the torpedoes and bullets, life changes forever, especially for Stanley, whose mom is Japanese American. Now, she is "the enemy" to many. Can their friendship and dreams survive?

You'll find all of the books on this list on Sora (the Saint Ann's digital library) <https://soraapp.com/library/saintannssny>. For Sora instructions flip to last page of this list.

SPOOKY BOOKS

The Doomsday Archives

by Zack Loran Clark

The moment Emrys moves into New Rotterdam he knows there's something off. The fog rarely lifts. There are stories about cursed objects, strange disappearances, and monstrous creatures that appear at night. Emrys bonds with his new neighbors, and together they start investigating. But wait...what is that?? Are real monsters hunting them back?

The Deadly Daylight

by Ash Harrier

Alice works in a funeral home and receives messages from dead people. Kids at school are not nice to her. When she “hears” from a dead man who died of a rare sun allergy, she becomes convinced it's murder. She IDs two suspects—kids—but as she investigates, they start to become her allies, then her friends. Clues abound as the quirky trio tries to find courage in the truth.

Hide and Seeker

by Daka Hermon

This book is scary. Justin's best friend Zee had been missing for more than a year. Now he's back, and his mom throws him a party where kids start a game of hide-and-seek. Justin notices that Zee just isn't himself, and when Zee starts muttering rhymes about a seeker who will take them all, it makes Justin's blood run cold. Then, one by one, the kids who played the game start disappearing. Can Justin and his friends defeat the seeker?

SPORTS STORIES

Warrior on the Mound

by Sandra Headen

In 1930s North Carolina, 12-year-old Cato dreams of becoming a legendary pitcher like his father, who played for the Negro Leagues. But when he and his teammates on an all-Black team are seen playing on a new whites-only baseball field, racial tensions ignite. As violence looms, Cato leads his team in a high-stakes game against the white players, uncovering family secrets and confronting deep-rooted racism. A story of courage, friendship, and the fight for equality.

Free Throws, Friendship, and Other Things We Fouled Up

by Jenn Bishop

When Abby moves to a new city after her parents split up, one of the first kids she meets is Rory. Both talented basketball players, they become close quickly, bonding over everything—especially the game. They soon learn that their fathers were childhood besties, but there was a feud. Now, the two men, who coach rival college basketball teams, won't even shake hands when their teams play. Against the backdrop of March Madness, Abby and Rory work to uncover the mystery of the break and mend it, while finding their own friendship challenged.

The Academy

by T.Z. Layton

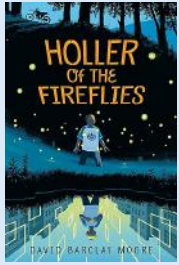

Leo is a star soccer player with dreams of Olympic gold and the pros, but he lives in small town USA and has never even flown on a plane. How could it ever happen? Then, a scout spots him at one of his games and invites him to try out for the youth squad of a world-famous English Premier League team—in England. Next thing he knows, he's jetting to tryouts, where 11 out of 200 of the best youth players in the world will be chosen. There's tons of drama on the pitch, along with a bully who has it out for Leo, a roommate who is just not fun, and—two sequels to look forward to.

CAMP STORIES

Holler of the Fireflies

by David Barclay Moore

Javari, a shy boy who's lived his whole life in Brooklyn, gets the chance to spend two weeks at a science summer camp in the Appalachian Mountains. Great characters, fantastic camp scenes, and intriguing realizations that social justice issues transcend geography.

Out of My Heart

by Sharon Draper

Melody convinces her parents to let her go to camp, where she can experience the kind of independence she's never had. Melody has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair and communication device, and she is nervous—but she powers through thunderstorms, potentially haunted cabins, a scarily high zipline, and maybe a crush, to prove to herself how brave she can be. Sequel to Out of My Mind.

Camp Quiltbag

by A.J. Sass and Nicole Melleby

Abigail (she/her/hers) is so excited to spend her summer at Camp Quiltbag, a retreat for queer and trans kids where she can be herself. Kai (e/em/eir) is not at all thrilled. After a bit of a rocky start, Abigail and Kai make a pact: If Kai helps Abigail make new friends, Abigail will help Kai's cabin with the all-camp competition.

Second Chance Summer

by Sarah Kapit

Maddie and Chloe had been best friends for forever—until Maddie's growing popularity left Chloe on the outside too many times. They've definitely called it quits. Then, they wind up as bunkmates at camp. Can their friendship be revived? Should it be?

To Night Owl From

Dogfish

by Holly Goldberg Sloan & Meg Wolitzer

Avery and Brett have nothing in common—until their dads fall in love and decide the girls should meet by going to sleepaway camp. Together. What?? Written entirely in emails and letters, this hilarious book has lots of heart, drama, and camp!

Camp Murderface

by Josh Berk and Sandra Mitchell

It's the summer of 1983. Corryn and Tez are brought together by eerie phenomena at their camp and rumors of a haunted lake that requires the sacrifice of a camper every couple of decades. Their unlikely friendship grows as they confront Camp Sweetwater's sinister past, racing to uncover the truth before it's too late.

Mirror to Mirror

by Rajani LaRocca

Unable to get along like before, once-close twin sisters Maya and Chaya make a bet: they'll switch places at summer camp and whoever can keep the trick going the longest will get to make a life-changing decision for both of them—which definitely isn't as easy as it sounds. Written in verse.

MYSTERIES

Daybreak on Raven

Island by Fleur Bradley Noah, Tori, and Marvin are not friends and they'd rather be anywhere else than on their class trip to the abandoned Raven Island prison. But when the three of them stumble upon a dead body in the woods, miss the last ferry home, and then have to spend the night on the island, they must work together—to uncover a killer, outrun a bizarre ghost-hunting crew, and reveal the ancient secrets of the island. And do it all before daybreak.

Mystery on Magnolia

Circle by Kate Klise On the first day of summer vacation, Ivy falls down the stairs and breaks her leg. Stuck in a giant cast, all she can do is look out the window and watch other people having fun. Then, she sees a burglary happen right in front of her. She teams up with her neighbor and best friend, Teddy (who's also in a terrible mood—his dog just died), to find the culprit. And before they get far, another mystery rears its head. If this reminds you of a famous old movie, you're on the right track!

What Happened to

Rachel Riley? by Claire Swinarski "I hope you learn from everything in this box how Rachel Riley went from being the most popular girl to a Complete Social Outcast of the First Degree." Anna, a new kid at East Middle School, uses social media posts, emails, and other artifacts to solve what to her is the biggest mystery about her new school for a class project called an "un-essay." Riveting!

Ophie's Ghosts

by Justina Ireland Ophie saw her first ghost when she was 12. It was her father, who had been killed in a racist murder in 1920s Georgia. He tells Ophie that she and her mom must flee. They end up in Pittsburgh—where the real mystery starts. Who is Clara, the ghost Ophie meets in the house where she works? Who killed her—and why? A page-turner that explores issues of race and historical injustice.

Would you say these books are hoooo-dunnits?

Tangled Up in Luck

by Merrill Wyatt Seventh-graders Sloane (popular and sporty) and Amelia (quirky and nicknamed Yeti) are NOT happy to be paired for a research project about long-lost jewels. But soon, they are finding clues that have been hidden for nearly a century—and crouching behind gravestones in their town cemetery, dodging an evil mastermind. Can they escape alive, find the jewels, and maybe not loathe each other?

Don't Want to Be Your

Monster by Deke Moulton You like vampires and mysteries and social justice? Here: As a baby, 10-year-old Adam was left injured at the scene of a hate crime and found by two vampires (now his foster mothers), who bit him to save his life. He's been protected from mortals his whole childhood, but when bodies start to appear all over town, and it seems like a vampire hunter is on the loose, he steps out into our world and teams up with two mortal kids and his annoying older foster brother to save his family and SOLVE THE MYSTERY.

HISTORICAL FICTION

The Luminous Life of Lucy Landry

Landry

by Anna Rose Johnson

It's 1912, and after losing her father at sea Lucy goes to live with a foster family—the Martins—who share her First Nations Anishinaabe heritage. There are six Martin kids to try to fit in with and Lucy struggles with her fear of the water; the family home and livelihood is a lighthouse in the middle of stormy Lake Superior. Then, she realizes she's in just the right place to search for the legendary necklace her father spent his life seeking.

Max in the House of Spies

by Adam Gidwitz

Historical fiction with a dash of magic. World War II is on the horizon and Germany is more and more dangerous for Jewish families. Max doesn't want to leave Berlin, but he's sent to London for safety (this really happened with groups of kids). It turns out he has a tiny spirit on each shoulder who tell us parts of his story. Desperate to get back to his family, Max tries to persuade the British government to send him back to Germany as a spy. What will happen?

The Many Assassinations

of Samir, Seller of Dreams

by Daniel Nayeri

A thrice-orphaned servant boy traveling with a trading caravan along the Silk Road in the 11th century must repeatedly save his lovable hustler master from killers, as he tries to free himself. Funny, exciting, and filled with Silk Road lore and history.

Humans call a group of owls a "parliament."

PAGE-TURNING NONFICTION!

The Mona Lisa Vanishes

by Nicholas Day

Transports you back to turn-of-the-century Paris, where you'll bear witness to the heist of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre, making it the most famous painting in the world. (Did you know that Pablo Picasso was briefly a suspect?) You'll also meet Leonardo DaVinci and the world where the Mona Lisa came to be, and ponder the mystery of who exactly is pictured in the portrait and why it was painted.

Where Are the Aliens?

by Stacy McAnulty

If we aren't alone in the universe, where is everybody? What's the story with Area 51? Is there a secret government UFO report? What's the mathematical chance other life forms exist? How do scientists listen to and (possibly!) communicate with far-off exoplanets? Intrigued? If yes, you'll love this fun and information-packed book, which is dedicated to "You, reader, and future extraterrestrial visitors."

All Thirteen: Incredible

Cave Rescue of the Thai Boys' Soccer Team

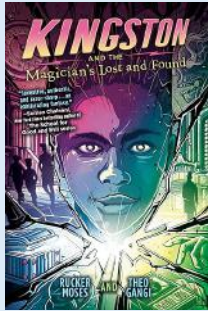

by Christina Soontornvat

Tale of the dramatic 18-day rescue mission to save 12 young soccer players and their coach from the Cave of the Sleeping Lady after it flooded. They'd hiked in for a bit of adventure after a practice. Amazing storytelling with information about everything from Buddhism to hydraulics to the plight of stateless people in Thailand.

FANTASY AND MAGICAL HAPPENINGS

Kingston & the Magician's

Lost and Found

by Rucker Moses and Theo Gangi Kingston's father was one of the world's greatest magicians—until a trick went wrong four years ago and he disappeared. Now 12, Kingston has moved to Brooklyn, the last place his father was seen alive. There, he learns that magic is real and that if he dares enter the Realm, he might get his father back.

Emma and the Love Spell

By Meredith Ireland

Emma's best friend (and secret crush) is moving away because her parents are getting a divorce. Emma—a witch adopted from Korea into a white non-witch family—has promised her parents never to use her magic. But would one little spell really be so terrible?

Witchlings

by Claribel Ortega

Every year at the Black Moon Ceremony, Witchlings are placed into one of five powerful covens and become full witches—except those designated as “Spare Witch.” Spares become servants with lesser powers. That is Seven Salazar's greatest fear—and it comes true. Can Seven and the two other Spares come together to challenge the system? If they try and fail, the stakes are high: total loss of powers, and much more. (There's a sequel: The Golden Frog Games.)

Amari and the Night

Brothers

by B.B. Alston Amari and her brother Quinton are among the few Black kids at their fancy private school. When he mysteriously disappears, the police assume he was up to no good. Furious, and certain that racism is behind their attitude, Amari begins her own investigation. It leads to the Bureau of Supernatural Affairs, where Amari learns she's capable of powerful magic and must battle an evil magician threatening the supernatural realm—all while searching for her brother. AND, there's a sequel (Amari and the Great Game).

The Iron Trial

by Holly Black and Cassandra Clare

Most people would do anything to get into the Magisterium and pass the Iron Trial. Not Callum Hunt. His father has taught him that magic is evil and leads only to war. (Cal's mother was killed in a magic war.) Cal can't refuse his invitation to the Iron Trial, but he is determined to fail. Instead, he is accepted and must become a mage's apprentice. Magic! Battles! Plus, friends, choices—and four awesome sequels.

Ellie Engle Saves Herself!

by Leah Johnson

Ellie is just a regular comics-loving Black girl with a pet fish. But things change radically one night when she's at her best friend's house (also maybe crush?) and there's an earthquake. Soon she discovers she has strange powers, including the ability to raise the dead (she brings her beloved fish back to life). Her first impulse is, KEEP IT SECRET. How can Ellie be her true self?

TOUGH SITUATIONS

We're Not From Here

by Geoff Rodkey

Having to leave your planet (Earth) because it's been blown up is a "tough situation," right? That's just the beginning for Lan and their family, who must convince the insectlike inhabitants of the planet Choom—who had agreed to accept refugee Earthlings and then changed their minds—to let them stay. A serious yet funny book about a high stakes situation—being an immigrant with no place to go.

Not the Worst Friend in the World

by Anne Rellihan

This book has strong Harriet the Spy vibes. Lou and Francie were BFFs. Then Lou said some horrible things to Francie, and, just like that, she'd lost her best friend. Now, nobody at school is talking to Lou and she wonders if she'll ever get her friend back. When a new kid in the grade asks Lou to help her prove that her dad had kidnapped her, Lou says yes. She figures that helping would show that she's capable of being a good friend. As they investigate, Lou starts to wonder if her new friend's problems are too big for them to handle alone. Notebook entries and flashbacks help tell the story.

The Probability of

Everything

by Sara Everett

"Dear Reader, If you are reading this then chances are that our world has ended." If that first line intrigues you and you like reading VERY SAD books with plot twists, then this one's for you. There's an asteroid heading toward Earth, and if we told you more there'd be spoilers.

The Remarkable Journey of Coyote Sunrise

by Dan Gemeinhart

Coyote and her father have been on the road in a school bus for five years—ever since her mom and sisters were killed in a tragic car accident. Her father won't even talk about going home. Then, Coyote hears that a park where she, her mom, and her sisters hid a memory box is about to be demolished. She decides she must go get it before it's too late. The trick will be getting her dad to take her there. A sequel to this sad and wonderful book was just published: Coyote Lost and Found.

Simon Sort of Says

by Erin Bow

The summer before seventh grade, Simon and his family—looking to escape their fame—move to the only place in the U.S. where the internet is banned (so scientists can explore the universe). As Simon tells his story we learn why he's famous: In fifth grade he lived through a school shooting and was the only survivor. This surprisingly funny book is about making friends, surviving trauma, and moving forward without forgetting the past.

Starfish

by Lisa Fipps

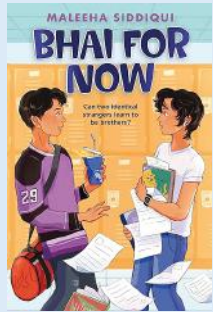

Ellie has spent her life being bullied because she's fat. The stupid jokes from classmates are horrible, but her mother's cruel attitude is the worst of it. In this novel-in-verse we learn how she makes new friends and, with help from her dad and a therapist, stands up to the bullies. An ode to being yourself, and really a page-turner.

THAT'S FUNNY!

Bhai for Now

by Maleeha Siddiqui Shaheer walks into a new school for his first day and sees—himself? Soon, he and the other boy—Ashar—figure out that they're twins separated when they were babies. Their parents divorced and each parent got a twin. Nobody had ever told them. With the help of a cousin, they decide to do a Parent Trap and secretly switch places—for a bit of payback and to learn some things. This book is funny, but it's also heartfelt and kind of deep.

The Superteacher Project

by Gordon Korman
Oliver is king of pranks at his school, but when he sends a spitball hurtling toward his new teacher, the guy catches it in midair. Soon, Mr. Aidact is the most popular teacher at school—with both kids and adults. Is he too good to be true? Or rather, too good to be human? (Spoiler alert: Yes.)

Misfits: A Royal

Conundrum by Lisa Yee, illustrated by Dan Santat

Olive is used to not fitting in, and when her parents drop her off at a new school, she's ready for awkwardness. But—this is a secret school where Olive learns spy skills and she teams up with an elite group of misfits trained to fight crime. Just when she's starting to love it, the school is threatened. Can she and her quirky new friends save the day? Tons of laughs and action.

Bud Not Buddy

by Christopher Paul Curtis
If you haven't read this hilarious classic by the author of The Watsons Go to Birmingham, now is the time. It's 1936 and 10-year-old Bud, whose mother died when he was six, is on the run from a cruel foster family in search of the jazz musician he is sure is his father. Times are tough: The Great Depression is raging and racism is a constant presence, but Bud never loses hope—or his crazy sense of humor. The audiobook is especially great.

Leeva at Last

by Sara Pennypacker

If you like Roald Dahl, you'll love this laugh-out-loud book! Leeva's mother (the mayor) says people are for fame; her father (the town treasurer) says they're for money. These hilariously buffoonish idiots have decided that Leeva isn't good for either—so they've made her into a servant. Leeva decides there must be more to life, and finds the courage to leave her yard to discover the wonders of the world.

We may not be furry and soft, but owls laugh too.

Stand Up, Yumi Chung

by Jessica Kim

Yumi is a shy Korean-American 11-year-old who is constantly writing standup comedy routines, and dreams of her own Netflix special. Her parents have other ideas—mostly involving school and studying. Yumi winds up living a double life trying to please both herself and her parents. When will she be able to tell everyone the truth? Funny and real!
